

1. Let's start with the most basic shapes to begin with. Draw the shape of the four whole eggs, don't worry about the space where the chick will go for now. The red lines show you what to draw next, continue to use your sketching pencil for the plan of the drawing.

2. The next step is to add the cracks in the eggs. Then we can plan where we want our flowers to go by drawing some small circles. We can also add a larger circle for the egg that the chick will be sitting in!

3. Add petals around the centre of the flowers, by drawing lots of small ovals all the way around each circle. You can also add a zig-zag edge to the larger egg to show that the top has come off. Then give the flowers some stems by drawing slightly curved lines going from the centre of the flower to the ground.

4. Now we can start on the basic shapes of our animals. Start with the chick's head, eye and the shape of the beak. The chick's body should fit inside the egg, so draw two small curved lines from the head into the egg to show this.

5. Now we can add more detail to the chick, finish off his mouth by drawing the inside edge of his beak and his tongue. Finally draw the top piece of his shell in front of the eggs by adding a curved line with a zig-zag edge at the top.

6. Now we are going to draw the bunny. Start with the most basic shapes, such as circles for the feet, toes, nose, body, face and legs. The ears are long and pointed, like a squashed circle.

7. Now add the rest of the detail for our bunny! The shape of his face can be made using two different sized ovals. Then add two lines for each leg, and another two for each foot, then one big oval for his tummy!

8. Add two curved lines to fill the gaps between his front paws, add another line in each of his ears. Then just draw his mouth and teeth, and we are ready to move on to the next step!

7. Now to give our animals some feathers and fur! Start with the chick, pressing lightly, carefully draw zig-zag lines around his head and the bit of his body you can see.

The bunny's fur will be a little more difficult, but take your time and press lightly so you can easily rub out any mistakes.

8. When you are happy with your plan. Take out your 2B pencil and go over the outline of the whole drawing. Think carefully about which lines you need to keep and which ones you can erase.

7. Now we can start colouring in! Choose lots of different colours and flip your pencils for more choice!

8. Here is my finished easter scene, I coloured the sky blue and the grass green, but you can choose any colours you like. Or if you like, you could do patterns instead!
